Teleseminars and Webinars

Teleseminar and business Webinar attendees have an opportunity to learn without ever leaving their desks. These unique learning experiences are facilitated by Marsha in a highly entertaining fashion for small groups up to an audience of 1,000 people and allows your target audience quick access.

Whatever conferencing service you use, Marsha can modify her message to whatever vendor you choose to use. In addition, these presentations can be adapted to any time period up to 2 hours.

Teleseminar: listening to seminars on the telephone. The phone number and pass code are distributed via email or may be available on the company or association website.

Webinar: uses the Internet and a telephone for viewing and listening to presentations. Or a Webinar can be on-line only. PowerPoint is used, as well as interactive input with comments and questions from participants.

With either a Teleseminar or Webinar, attendees don't have to make travel arrangements, book expensive flights, hotel, or car rental since they don't have to leave their offices or homes. All a participant needs to do is pick up the phone, call a special number, and enter a unique code to listen to the presentation. This mode of delivery is perfect for telecommuters and satellite offices.

These alternatives to live seminars can:

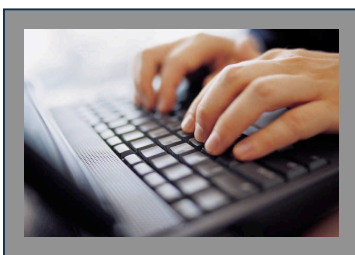

- Be recorded and used as training within your organization
- Provide lunch and learn opportunities by tailoring Marsha's message to your group
- Give members a sampling of what will be covered in Marsha's scheduled live presentation
- Provide your clients with leadership and communication training for their staff, giving you a differentiation from your competitors

Teleseminar and Webinar speaking fee:

$1500 for Teleseminar

$2000 for a Webinar (includes tailored PowerPoint)

In addition, Marsha can provide appropriate articles for your publications that can be customized for your meeting and group.
